Project 2	Digital Forms

Reflecting on what you have learned in Project 1, translate your publication into a companion online experience.
You will have to decide if your online experience shows the same content, the same concept through a different lens, new content within the same collection, or somehow is meant to be looked at simultaneously with the printed project.

—Can be a website shown on desktop or mobile.
—Must be either a clickable, high-fidelity prototype or coded.

Example	Perhaps the online experience is a website with an audio soundtrack meant to be played while flipping through your publication.

Also create a dynamic poster that interprets the content through the lens of movement (to be used for social media or a digital billboard).

Your digital translation should include a concept, structure, navigation, typography, layout and grid, and a cohesive visual system. The relationship between the digital experience and the overall narrative should be clear.

Present your finished project with a ~5 slide presentation connecting concept to final form.
–Remind us of the concept
–Pull out design details from your digital project that speak to concept
–Is there a connection with the printed project?
